Our Curate's Jottings

Now I've been here for just over a year, I've seen the full cycle of the seasons across the farms and villages of the Benefice. For someone new to life in the country, it still comes to me as a surprise and a joy to see so much beauty that changes week by week, month by month. Being so close to the countryside makes me feel very proud of it, and very protective.

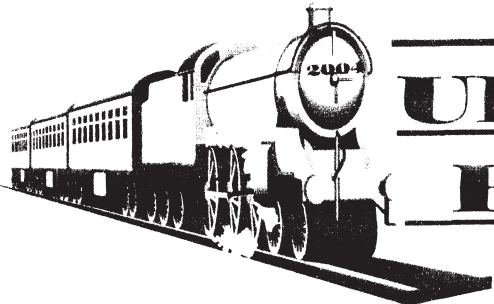

This closeness to nature seems to make more shocking news concerning the environment, like this morning's bulletin on the Today programme, telling me that the Greenland ice-sheet is melting ten times faster than expected. And large-scale flooding, climate change, drought and famine are all suddenly much nearer prospects.

So I glance down at my breakfast to see how much I'm contributing to this even now. Scrambled eggs — local, free-range, ok; bread— from a local baker, good; an orange — ah, air-freighted from South America by a petrol-guzzling jet. Even just eating my breakfast, it seems, I'm treating the planet, our countryside, our children's lives, with reckless abandon. I can't even bear to think what damage I'll do in the day ahead.

Living the good life, loving one's neighbour, is so often portrayed in terms of individual relationships. But just as important is the way we treat the world and society.

are a crucial part of this. They are having drastic consequences already, and getting more serious every year. The desert fathers of the second century used to say 'Our life and death is with our neighbour.' This has never been more true than it is in the twenty-first century.

PURCHASE OF BURIAL GROUND EXTENSION

The Parish Council is happy to announce that on Tuesday 20 July 2004 it finally completed the purchase of an extension to the Upton Burial Ground. It is now the responsibility of the Parish Council rather than the Church to organise such matters.

The late Sheila Parker set the ball rolling by taking up a generous offer from Guy Napper to sell a section of land adjacent to the existing cemetery. That was more than four years ago, but the bureaucracy we endured to get various permissions has been at times wearing.

However, it is all completed. When the harvest is in and the field has been ploughed we shall enclose the area — roughly the size of the existing cemetery — with a post and rail fence. Access will be through a small gate off the footpath down the field. Eventually another entrance will be opened between the old and new burial grounds.

To begin with we intend to plant meadow grass and wild flowers, and possibly trees and/or a hedgerow. It will not be needed immediately, so we can look upon it as pleasure garden.

To cover the purchase, the Parish Council has taken out a long-term loan. We have also been setting aside funds for some years, so there will be only a small increase in the precept. We felt that this extension was a good offer and it was important to secure such an asset for the future of the village.

NEIGHBOURHOOD WATCH

1 There are a large number of Irish travellers staying at Haddon Hill, North Moreton. They have been visiting Upton offering to do odd jobs for cash, using a 'Kestrel Paving' van. Please be aware of this and wary of cold callers.

1 There have been some attempts by children, in the small hours, to siphon off petrol from cars parked in Fieldside. Please make sure your petrol cap is locked.

1 Flanders and Swann was a great success. The pleasing voice of James Mitchell and keyboard talent of Graham O'Connor, along with their witticisms, gave us a very enjoyable evening and was much appreciated by an enthusiastic audience. They can come again!
