RECTOR'S REFLECTIONS

Glyn Evans, the Diocesan Rural Officer, recently highlighted a statistic emerging from a survey showing the importance of the parish church in rural communities. It came fourth in a list of institutions thought to be most valued in a village.

Few parish clergy can be unaware that the buildings in their care are important resources and I like to think that the church here is seen and used as such. An additional function is the ministry it offers to the whole community. However, changes to the parochial structure have impacted on the traditional perception of the relationship between priest and people. Last year ministry costs in the Oxford diocese came out at £18.7m, of which £14.3m was from direct giving of members.

What must be done to provide what the survey shows is a valuable asset? The solution is two-fold and something we discovered over 10 years ago: collaborative ministry, which is visible in the Local Ministry Team, and the acceptance by parishioners of this style of ministry.

Through hard work and dedication, members are ensuring that ministry is available for everyone throughout the parishes of the new Benefice, enhancing worship, developing Christian education and exercising effective pastoral care in different ways.

This does depend upon people accepting ministry from other lay people, which I am glad to say has never been a problem. This may be due to the high standard achieved by team members, who have a range of extraordinary gifts. I hope we are growing into a time where the Church will be seen as authentic because of the ministry of all its members.

Churn is a good name for the enlarged Benefice because it reflects the early Christianity here watched over by St. Birinus. So begins a partnership of six parishes (including the Astons and Moretons) and the future is bright — not orange but golden.

It has been my experience that parishes flourish in partnership because, with shared resources, so much more can be accomplished. Already we have learnt much about working together. This is especially true of all the churchwardens who have developed a real collegiate relationship.

We are also fortunate indeed to have a new colleague in Fr. Anthony Lury, who will join us at the beginning of September. At present the parish priest of All Saints, Ascot Heath he will be coming here, with his wife Rosemary, as a part-time Associate Priest. With three ordained clergy and our highly valued Team, we shall be in the best possible position to work to build up the Kingdom of God in our delightful rural communities. Yours in Christ

Fr. Edwin

VILLAGE HISTORY —

Upton's leaking stream

an occasional series contributed by

Juliet Gardiner

Our little intermittent stream, originating high above the village, which has been running predictably for countless years, was found to be in full flow one day in October 2001, not from its usual source but from under the main road near the George & Dragon. Over the next three or four months we repeatedly alerted Thames Water to the probability that this was a massive water leak, but nothing was done. The stream continued in full flow without interruption over three and a half years. During this time tiny fishes appeared in the water, the number of frogs increased — perhaps many other water creatures benefited. But by July 2005 water was breaking through the tarmac at the end of Prospect Road, and at last Thames Water turned up to repair the leak. The flow in the stream immediately stopped.

So what of the future? At the moment we are simply not getting enough rain in the autumn and winter to get the springs running again. The stream bed is blocked with vegetation and debris in many places and parts of it look rather neglected. It would be lovely to restore this small waterway some time, in the hope that wetter winters we have been promised will materialise to fill it.
